

MACE ENERGY METHOD (MEM™) CERTIFIED TRAINING

The practical aspect of Causim is called Mace Energy Method, MEM

Causism has absolutely no connection whatsoever with psychology, psychiatry, any other modality or religion. It is the product of 50 plus year's of independent investigation into human life, following an entirely new line of research, so it is a unique unparalleled body of knowledge that ushers in a totally new paradigm of vast proportions. A highly significant feature is that unlike psychology and all other forms of counselling, it is totally free of self-disclosure. This aspect alone makes it unique and because of this, an essential pre-requisite for training is to have an introductory session to gain subjective understanding from a qualified practitioner.

The Basic Training course is in four modules or sections. Sections one and two mainly cover theory and sections three and four have a mixture of theory and practical.

The graduates who use the method are called Mace Energy Method Counsellors (MEM), however, this is not to be confused with conventional counselling, for the method is totally devoid of self-disclosure by the client and advise on the part of the MEM Counsellor, even if asked for.

The Specialised course is available after gaining experience with the basic course materials. It contains theory and practical procedures that rely upon a deeper understanding of our relationship with the energy universe.

As part of the training, both in-house and distant learning, all students receive personal sessions needed, to address anything triggered by the material covered or through life's circumstances. Even though a student has received a full mandatory session before commencing training, the course material invariably triggers negative energy flows, so to ensure that they remain 'squeaky clean', they receive as many sessions as needed to eliminate any of these flows.

Once enrolled, the very first thing done on course is to eliminate all hang-ups to do with learning, as past difficulties carry forward and ALWAYS impede the study of a new subject. By hang-ups, it is meant any past failures, upsets or disappointments.

The “method” is empirical and during its years of development it has been greatly refined, so that the course has been reduced to about 300 pages of written material, plus graphical illustrations and a series of video lectures.

The brevity of the course may be queried, but without the wheel we would be living in the Stone Age and like the wheel, the procedure gets its power from its simplicity.

PRE-REQUISITES

The one pre-requisite to training is to have had a full session from a trained practitioner. The reason for this pre-requisite is that the method is so revolutionary there is no other modality with which it can be compared, so a future trainee needs a session to appreciate and understand how it works, in other words to acquire subjective reality. Reading provides objective reality, but no amount of reading will provide the essential subjective reality. From a practical point of view it would be totally unrealistic for someone to help others at a professional level if they themselves lacked personal experience with the material. It would be a case of the blind leading the blind.

TRAINING SCHEDULE

The Mace Energy Counselling Method gets its power from its simplicity and in keeping with that, the training course has been stripped of any superfluous data, which is why it is so comparatively brief, but its apparent brevity in no way detracts from its effectiveness.

About 60 hours of student time (plus some home reading) for the course is average. Students are scheduled for one day a week only, because they need time to assimilate the new data. Full time study was tried to expedite training, but as another example of the empirical nature of the work, it was abandoned as it did not produce satisfactory results. Lectures and video sessions by Founder John Mace, are provided as part of the training that covers all the key data from his research.

The theory training is followed by practice using the unique procedures, then an internship follows. When the student can produce good results, they are Certified as a Mace Energy Method Counsellor.

MEM Counsellor training can be provided in-house or via correspondence. It typically takes 10-12 weeks to obtain certification and part-time options are available that can be extend to 6 months.

In House Training is limited to 2- 4 participants which maximizes individual involvement and personalizes the training. Trainees attend one day per week only, as this allows time to assimilate the new data.

Distance Learning students set their own schedule, but time needed to complete the theory section is dependent upon individual aptitude and amount of time personally allocated.

Correspondence is conducted via Skype www.skype.com or telephone.

SPECIALIZED TRAINING IN MEM COUNSELLING

This course provides specialized techniques for the MEM Counsellor. Procedures for acute addictions, psychosomatics and MEM surrogacy are taught. This one module is covered in approx 10 hours of higher level personalized training that will allow further refinement of MEM skills.

MEM Specialized training can also be provided in-house or via correspondence.

The Mace Energy Method has been recognized and endorsed by the IICT

For further information and our MEM training fees, please contact one of our global MEM Trainers listed on our International website

<http://www.maceenergymethod.com/mem-counselling-training/>